Comprehension:

Read the following passage and answer the questions :

The first step is for us to realise that a city need not be a frustrater of life; it can be among other things, a mechanism for enhancing life, for producing possibilities of living which are not to be realized except through cities. But, for that to happen, deliberate and drastic planning is needed. Towns as much as animals, must have their systems of organs-those for transport and circulation are an obvious example.

What we need now are organ systems for recreation, leisure, culture, community expression. This means abundance of open space, easy access to unspoilt nature, beauty in parks and in fine buildings, gymnasias and swimming baths and recreation grounds in plenty, central spaces for celebrations and demonstrations, halls for citizens' meetings, concert halls and theatres and cinemas that belong to the city.

And the buildings must not be built anyhow or dumped down anywhere; both they and their grouping should mean something important to the people of the place.

Comprehension:

Read the following passage and answer all the questions accordingly.

Tectonic forces are the primary factor that drives the dynamic processes that form the crust of the Earth, which are referred to as earth movements. These movements can be classified into sudden and slow processes. The phenomenon known as seismicity describes the existence of earthquakes, which are caused by the movement of tectonic plates. The intensity of seismic activities are measured using the Richter scale. Folding occurs when compressional forces act on rock layers, causing them to bend. This process creates geological features such as anticlines and synclines. Faulting happens when stress exceeds the strength of rocks, leading to fractures and displacement along fault lines. Types of faults include normal, reverse, and strike-slip faults. Vulcancity involves the movement of magma from the Earth's interior to the surface, resulting in volcanic eruptions. When it comes to volcanoes, there are three categories : active, dormant, and extinct. In addition to having a significant impact on human activity, these earth movements are also responsible for the formation of land forms.

Comprehension:

Read the following passage and answer all the questions accordingly.

Migration is a fundamental demographic process involving the movements of individuals or groups from one geographical location to another, driven by economic, social, political, and environmental factors. It can be categorized into voluntary and involuntary migration, internal and international migration, or temporary and permanent migration. Economic opportunities, better living conditions, education, and conflict are primary drivers of migration. Theories such as Ravenstein's Laws of migration, Lee's Push-Pull Theory, and World System Theory explain migration pattern and motivations. Migration has significant socio-economic impacts on both origin and destination regions. While receiving areas benefit from labor supply and cultural diversity, challenges such as pressure on infrastructure, labor market competition, and social integration arise. In contrast, source regions may experience brain drain or economic loss but benefit from remittances sent by migrants. The concept of transnationalism further highlights how migrants maintain connections across borders. Migration policies world wide seek to balance economic needs, national security, and humanitarian concerns, influencing global migration flows and their long-term consequences.

Comprehension:

Read the following passage and answer all the questions accordingly.

Migration is a fundamental demographic process involving the movements of individuals or groups from one geographical location to another, driven by economic, social, political, and environmental factors. It can be categorized into voluntary and involuntary migration, internal and international migration, or temporary and permanent migration. Economic opportunities, better living conditions, education, and conflict are primary drivers of migration. Theories such as Ravenstein's Laws of migration, Lee's Push-Pull Theory, and World System Theory explain migration pattern and motivations. Migration has significant socio-economic impacts on both origin and destination regions. While receiving areas benefit from labor supply and cultural diversity, challenges such as pressure on infrastructure, labor market competition, and social integration arise. In contrast, source regions may experience brain drain or economic loss but benefit from remittances sent by migrants. The concept of transnationalism further highlights how migrants maintain connections across borders. Migration policies world wide seek to balance economic needs, national security, and humanitarian concerns, influencing global migration flows and their long-term consequences.
