Comprehension:

Read the following passage and answer the questions :

A person who takes the trouble to form his own opinions and beliefs, will feel that he owes no responsibility to the majority for his conclusions. If he is a genuine lover of truth, if he is inspired by a passion for seeing things as they are and an abhorrence of holding ideas which do not conform to facts, he will be wholly independent of the assent of those around him. When he proceeds to apply his beliefs in the practical conduct of life, the position is different. There are then good reasons why his attitude should be less inflexible. The society in which he is placed is an ancient and composite growth. The people from whom he dissents have not come by their opinions, customs and by a process of mere haphazard.

These opinions and customs all had their origin in a certain real supposed fitness. They have certain depth of root in the lives of a proportion of the existing generation. Their congruity with one another may have come to an end. That is only one side of the truth. The most zealous propagandism cannot penetrate to them. In common language, we speak of a generation as something possessed of a kind of exact unity, with all its parts and members homogenous. Yet, plainly it is not this. It is a whole but a whole in a state of constant flux, its factors and elements are eternally shifting. It is not one but many generations.

Comprehension:

Read the following paragraph and answer the questions :

Human rights are the foundation of human dignity and freedom in every civilized society. These rights such as right to life and liberty, freedom of speech and expression are often taken for granted until they are challenged. Beside these rights our constitution bestows fundamental duties also. A person who enjoys freedom of speech must also restrain from giving hate speech. Similarly, the right to education brings the duty to seek knowledge with integrity and respect for other's learning. In a globalized world, it is easy to demand rights, but how often do individual reflect on the duties that sustain a just society is obvious. When people ignore the needs of vulnerables, their silence challenge the very idea of universal human rights. The balance between rights and responsibilities is delicate - too much emphasis on one can weaken the other. As societies evolve, so do the expectation placed on individuals and institutions alike. The real test lies in whether people recognize that rights are not gifts, but shared values that demand active participation of all. Without this awareness, true equality and justice cannot be fully realized.

Comprehension:

Read the following paragraph and answer the questions :

Human rights are the foundation of human dignity and freedom in every civilized society. These rights such as right to life and liberty, freedom of speech and expression are often taken for granted until they are challenged. Beside these rights our constitution bestows fundamental duties also. A person who enjoys freedom of speech must also restrain from giving hate speech. Similarly, the right to education brings the duty to seek knowledge with integrity and respect for other's learning. In a globalized world, it is easy to demand rights, but how often do individual reflect on the duties that sustain a just society is obvious. When people ignore the needs of vulnerables, their silence challenge the very idea of universal human rights. The balance between rights and responsibilities is delicate - too much emphasis on one can weaken the other. As societies evolve, so do the expectation placed on individuals and institutions alike. The real test lies in whether people recognize that rights are not gifts, but shared values that demand active participation of all. Without this awareness, true equality and justice cannot be fully realized.

Read the following paragraph and answer the questions :

The globalization of production is aptly captured by phrases like 'from national production to global production', 'from local markets to global markets.' Transnational Corporations (TNCs) play significant role in this process. TNCs account for major part of the global production and international trade. World has also seen surge in transnational direct investment. As per the liberal school of thought, TNCs are responsible for direct investment and technological inflow in the developing countries. According to the thought, Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) provides additional resources, adds revenue, increases tax base, fosters division of labour and improves balance of payments. Indirectly, TNCs, through FDI, inject entrepreneurship, bring more effective resource allocation and enhance national welfare.

Critiques, however, argue that TNCs transfer very few and wrong kind of resources, lower tax paid, promote division of labour likely to be in the company's interest and worsen the balance of payment. Further more, they fail to change local business culture and undermine human rights. In order to attract foreign investment, governments of developing countries embark on many incentives, including creation of Export Processing Zones (EPZs). EPZs are attractive to TNCs, since they offer low-wage labour with minimal external costs. As per an ILO study, 'The frequent absence of minimal standards and poor labour-management relations have predictable excessive wastage of materials and labour and labour unrest which are still too common in EPZs.' Furthermore, majority of big TNCs are located in three countries, namely the USA, China and Japan. In addition, only 17 out of 500 major TNCs have appointed a women chief executive officer.
