Read the given passage and answer the questions that follow.

For any activity, discipline is the key word. It should begin with self, then be extended to the family, neighbours, environment, workplace, society and the nation at large. It is from society that inspiration is drawn. Systems and institutions should provide the inspiration to society through performance, which in turn will provide leaders capable of rebuilding and restructuring the society into a strong nation. The nationalists' spirit then becomes infectious.Discipline is the foundation of success in every aspect of life. It involves self-control, commitment and the ability to make the right choices, even when it's difficult. A disciplined person sets goals, follows routines and remains focused, overcoming distractions and setbacks with determination. Whether in academics, work or personal development, discipline helps maintain order and consistency, leading to long-term achievements. It builds character, fosters responsibility and earns respect from others. Without discipline, talent and intelligence alone may not lead to success. In essence, discipline is the bridge between ambition and accomplishment.
