Comprehension:
Read the passage carefully and answer the following questions.

Imran wanted to represent his school in the eight hundred metre race. During trials, he started too quickly, became exhausted, and finished last. Some students laughed, but his coach noticed that Imran had determination. She taught him to control his speed, breathe steadily, and improve gradually. Imran began waking early and practising on the community field. He recorded his time after every run. Progress was slow. On several mornings, cold wind made him want to remain in bed. He still put on his shoes and completed the planned distance. After two months, his time improved enough for another trial. This time, he remained calm and saved energy for the final lap. He finished second and earned a place on the school team. At the district race, Imran did not win a medal, but he achieved his best time. Instead of feeling disappointed, he congratulated the winners and thanked his coach. The following year, he trained with greater patience and finally won bronze. Imran understood that success may arrive in stages. Each honest effort strengthens the next one, and every failure can provide useful guidance for improvement. The lesson stayed with everyone. The experience strengthened their confidence and sense of responsibility.
